

sounds of men engaged in looking for bodies and as fast as they are found debris is piled about them and burned. It is the only way they can be disposed of. I still contend that my estimate of the dead is not too high. I can not be convinced that Mayor Jones is going far enough when he places it at 500. Colonel Bill Stewart, who has been here since yesterday, told me today that my first statement of 5000 is none too high. He is horrified beyond measure and when one asks him his opinion he throws up his hands and in silence walks away.

The streets are yet filled with debris and the people are fearing the outbreak of a fire which would destroy the whole city. A careless discard of a match or a cigar might cause this and the bare possibility makes people shudder. Every care is being taken, the soldiers are keeping a strict watch and special officers are patrolling the streets everywhere. I endeavored to get a buggy to drive about the city, but was told that it was impossible on account of the debris in the streets.

The records, books and papers of the court of civil appeals are intact, but the building is slightly damaged. The officers of the court are all safe. They are: Hon. C. C. Garrett, chief justice; Hon. R. A. Pleasants and Hon. W. H. Gill, associate justices; Hon. H. M. Knight, clerk; H. L. Garrett, deputy clerk; Jim Phillips (colored), porter. Mr. Knight is about the luckiest man in Galveston. The storm caused him the loss of a life or a dollar at his home. In fact, not a child or child is scratched.

Mrs. Mike O'Keefe and her son, Joe, are not dead. They are badly hurt and are at the home of Hon. Miles Crowley. Mr. O'Keefe is very anxious that this be corrected, as his wife has friends in the interior. Mr. O'Keefe states that Kate Kraus is not dead. He reports that Dixie Vaughan and Patrick Dugan are dead.

A report has reached me that yesterday afternoon a soldier killed a negro for slapping a white woman and taking from her a sack of flour.

Hon. J. S. Wheeler, about whom so many have asked me, was out of the city at the time of the disaster. His wife and child have been saved. They fled into the city from the Denver Resurvey before the water became too deep.

One thousand copies of The Post of today were distributed gratuitously to the people of Galveston from Houston Post headquarters as long as they lasted. The people were wild when they found out I had them and I was offered fabulous prices for a copy. I told each one that the papers were with the compliments of The Houston Post to the people of Galveston. I never had the pleasure of giving a more appreciated gift. The paper was read by everyone who could get hold of one.

Adjutant General Thomas Sourry, with Hunt McCabe and J. H. Hawley as aides, took charge of the military at 2 o'clock today. They will keep order, take charge of cleaning up the debris and attend to all matters except feeding and clothing the people. Their headquarters will be at the Tremont hotel.

E. K. Baker, general manager of the Southwestern Telegraph and Telephone company, is here with a force of linemen and is arranging to string four wires to Virginia Point.

THE NEEDS OF GALVESTON

AN OFFICIAL STATEMENT GIVEN OUT BY THE COMMITTEE.

Money is What is Desired from Abroad: Checks to be Made Payable at Galveston.

The following was sent last night to the local agent of the Associated Press and by him transmitted abroad:

Galveston, Texas, September 12.—We are receiving numerous telegrams of condolence and offers of assistance. As the telegraph wires are burdened we beg the Associated Press to communicate this response to all. Nearby cities are supplying and will supply sufficient food, clothing, etc., for immediate needs. Cities further away can serve us best by sending money. Checks should be made payable to John Seely, chairman finance committee. All supplies should come to W. A. McVitie, chairman relief committee. We have 25,000 people to clothe, feed for many weeks, and to furnish with household goods. Most of these are homeless and the others will require money to make their wrecked residences habitable. From this the world may understand how much money we will need. This committee will from time to time report our needs with more particularity. We refer to dispatch of this date by Mayor H. G. Lowe, which this committee fully endorses. All communications will please accept this answer in lieu of a direct response and be assured of the heartfelt gratitude of the entire population.

(Signed.) W. C. Jones, Mayor. M. Lasker, J. D. Skinner, C. H. McMaster, R. G. Lowe, Clarence Ousley, Committee.

INQUIRIES FOR FRIENDS AND RELATIVES.

The Post Will Endeavor to Give All Possible Information.

The Post has received hundreds and hundreds of telegrams from all parts of the country inquiring about friends and relatives at Galveston. It has been impossible to give the information desired thus far, except in a few instances where the facts were positively known.

The Post has established headquarters at Galveston, and men thoroughly acquainted with the city are in charge. They have been instructed to get names of the dead and living as rapidly as possible, and to make a systematic canvass of the city. It is an immense work, and can not be done in one day, or even one week, but the facts will be brought out and given to the public as quickly as human endeavor can obtain them.

In this connection The Post desires to state that all telegrams of inquiry received will be forwarded to Galveston and given attention. Houston people desiring to learn of friends and relatives not reported in this morning's list of dead or living, are requested to fill out the blank below, and all inquiries will be turned over to the Galveston headquarters as fast as couriers can take them there. Write names of parties inquired about very plainly, giving street location where possible. Information obtained will be published in The Post.

HELP THE UNFORTUNATE.

The Post Has Opened a Subscription for the Storm Sufferers.

It has been suggested from several quarters that The Post open its columns for the collection of subscriptions for the storm sufferers' fund, and in response to said suggestion The Post now invites the charitable of Houston, of Texas and of the country generally to come quickly to the rescue. All contributions sent in will be acknowledged by publication under this head, and the amounts will be turned over to the proper committees for distribution and application for the noble work of assisting the unfortunate.

The following sums came in yesterday:

Moulton, Texas, September 12.

Gentlemen—I inclose you a draft for $44.75, which is a contribution to the Galveston storm sufferers. You will please forward same to the proper parties for distribution. This was made up by the citizens of this place.

Yours very truly,
W. L. Tooley.

Houston, Texas, September 12.

Editor Houston Post, Houston, Texas.

Dear Sir—During the storm which swept our city last Saturday night my store was unroofed and the greater portion of my stock was entirely water-soaked, causing a loss which I am unable to ascertain at this writing.

In perusing a list of contributions I notice that my name does not appear and desiring to help the sufferers I beg to inclose you $10.00 toward their relief, notwithstanding my own great loss.

Respectfully,
Theo. Keller.

THE SITUATION IS REVIEWED.

How the Work of Relief is Progressing. Refugees in Houston.

Houston is now the haven for the unfortunate people of Galveston, thousands of whom are homeless and penniless.

Trains yesterday brought in between 500 and 1000 of the survivors of that fateful Saturday night and a motley crowd they were. Men, bareheaded, barefooted, hatless and coatless, with swollen feet and bruised and blackened bodies and heads, were numerous. Women of wealth and refinement, frequently hatless and shoeless, with the gowns in shreds, were among the refugees. Sometimes there would be a man, wife and a child or two, but these cases were rare, because few of those who came up but had suffered the loss of one or more members of the family, sometimes all.

Never were there so many sad hearts. Men bereft of wife and children; women who were widowed; children who were parentless—it was enough to touch the heart of anyone, and it did so. Never was there more heroism shown. Although a week ago these people had happy homes and were basking in the light of prosperity, and are now homeless, penniless and without relatives, they bore up grandly. True, they all were sad expressions, but there was no whimpering or complaining.

They were all made to feel that Houston is now their home, that they are welcome and that everything for their comfort and welfare is being done. They are being fed and housed and those in need of medical attention are placed in the hospitals, where they receive every care and are kindly ministered to.

All the world sympathizes with Galveston in her calamity, the most terrible which has ever happened in the United States. From the Atlantic to the Pacific have come not alone words of condolence and sympathy, but the charity that is of a practical kind. Trains loaded with provisions and clothing are on the way here as fast as steam engines can pull them; surgeons, nurses and medical supplies are also coming to assist in caring for the sick and distressed.

It has been a great relief to the refugees to reach Houston. Many had tasted little or no food since Saturday and had had no rest and virtually no sleep. They had been wandering aimlessly about the places where their homes had been; they had been nauseated by the awful stench arising from the dead—perhaps their own. It was a surprise, a relief from those horrible scenes which could not be seen in a nightmare or could not pass through the brain during manic pots.

What a contrast to the jolly, laughing Galveston crowds who were wont to come up to Houston to witness the fierce contests on the ball field. Then the blood ran hot, and there was rivalry and contention. Now all is changed—all is sorrow and sadness, and the people of Houston condole and sympathize with their stricken neighbors who are homeless and know not whither they may drift.

Scenes around the Grand Central depot were lively. Many of the refugees have had little experience in traveling and they did not know what to do when they were embarked from the trains. Those who were able to be repaired to the hotels, which soon became crowded and resorted to. Others walked about town and were taken in charge by the relief committees, the ladies also assisting in caring for the destitute. Not a few went to the homes of relatives or friends.

Around the office of The Post there were always crowds. The noon found that The Post was the headquarters for Galveston news and to this office they repaired to inquire concerning missing relatives and friends and to secure information concerning the living.

Telegraph offices were crowded all day by people sending off messages to inquiring and solicitous relatives assuring them of their safety, but only too frequently telling of the loss of a father, mother, wife, husband, son or some other relative. Never before have the telegraph wires in Texas been freighted with so many sad words.

The railroad companies deserve the gratitude of all. They have agreed to transport (as far as their lines run) free of charge all who may desire to leave, but who are unable to pay. Those who are able to bear the expense will only be charged half fare. At 205 Main street, Mr. L. Heubach has this branch of the work in charge.

In groups about the streets were the survivors. Whenever they began to tell of the awful ordeals through which they passed last Saturday night, of the horrible scenes they have witnessed since and of the terrible sufferings they have endured there were always eager listeners. Sorrowful and pitiful were some of these scenes as they heard an eye glistened with tears as they heard men tell of how their little families had been swept away, their home scattered to the four corners of the earth, and left them stranded and heavy hearted.

Representatives of the prominent newspapers of the country are arriving by every train on their way to Galveston in order that they may do the descriptive writing of the havoc wrought by wind and wave. The leading dailies and the illustrated papers and magazines are making strenuous efforts to secure photographs of scenes and gruesome descriptions of the once beautiful but now desolate island city.

B. F. Cameron of the firm of Cameron & Moore, lumber dealers, returned yesterday from Stowell, Chambers county. Mr. Cameron says that the relief party which went from Stowell to Bolivar reported to him that there was over 1000 dead bodies on the beach at Bolivar, in East bay, and in sight in the salt marshes which line that bay. This party succeeded in burying only twenty of these people. The others are lying in water and on land decomposing in the sand and giving forth a stench which is horrible. The carcasses of animals are mixed in with them. Many of these bodies were evidently swept across the bay from Galveston, others are of people who lived at Bolivar. He had no report as to those who were living at Bolivar, as most of them had gotten away. The party said that the only way to dispose of this immense number of human bodies and the carcasses of animals is for a force to collect and burn them; otherwise they are sure to breed an epidemic, which may extend far into the interior of Chambers county.

Yesterday it was found necessary to request Governor Sayers to order a military company dispatched to Houston.

Acting Mayor Tuffy sent the telegram on request of the Cotton Exchange members.

The railway companies have lost more financially than any other class or all put together yet they are contributing most liberally toward the relief of the distressed citizens in the stricken coast country.

They have been the victims of so much in-position it was necessary to send troops to protect them against the rabble.

Yesterday morning a crowd swooped down upon the outgoing Galveston, Houston and Henderson train. They were plainly and noisily told that the railway would not haul them or any one else down to Galveston. The crowd said they had passes from the mayor and intended going down anyhow. The train was loaded to keep them out, but they broke them and forcibly took possession of the train.

General Manager Hill of the Galveston, Houston and Henderson then went to Mayor Brasher and stated that too many passes were being issued, and that unless stopped the proper guards furnished, the railway would positively stop running trains. It was then agreed that no more passes would be issued unless absolutely necessary.

Many of the crowds go down through the city to see about relatives, but they could not do so. The trains were occupied by several who would ride down to Texas City and on returning, instead of giving up the seats to the worn-out and needy refugees, would hold them in one case a big, husky fellow refused to give up his seat to a little 12-year-old girl who had walked from Virginia Point to the junction and was completely frozen from Galveston very properly yanked him out of the seat, which was turned over to the tired-out little girl.

Meantime, the news soon spread through the city of the forcible taking of trains and a well known military man offered to raise a company of volunteers, whom he would guarantee would protect all trains and allow no one to board them unless it was agreeable to the railroad authorities. They would see that if one loaf of bread was sent down to feed the hungry and needy people of Galveston the Houstonians did not go down to devour it.

It will be about a month before the railway companies build their bridges across the bay to Galveston island, and it may be that all three roads will join in and build up substantial bridges, double tracked. It will be long time, however, before the wagon bridge is rebuilt, because the disaster will seriously affect county finances and the loss to property holders is so great that the next legislature may be petitioned to remit all Galveston county taxes.

The lodges of the city whose quiet charity attracts no attention are actively at work in assisting their brethren in Galveston. The task is so stupendous that special meetings are called for the purpose of raising money. There will be a joint meeting of all Knights of Pythias lodges tonight at the castle hall of Lamar lodge, 4154 Main street. Official headquarters of the Grand Lodge are at 205 Main street.

A committee of fifteen representatives of the Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. went down to Galveston yesterday to see what assistance they can render. They are empowered to draw for whatever amount of money may be needed.

The colored women of the city yesterday organized a union for the purpose of assisting in the relief of the sufferers of Galveston. Mrs. L. Privot was elected president and Mrs. R. E. Everett, secretary. Miss R. A. Watson, treasurer. Committees were appointed. First ward—Mrs. G. Lawrence and Mrs. M. Nelson.

Second ward—Mrs. J. B. Bell. Third ward—Mrs. P. Keelan and Mrs. Porter. Fourth ward—Mrs. H. B. Gray and Mrs. J. F. King.

Fifth ward—Mrs. Dr. Scott and Miss Sallie Nelson.

Sixth ward—to be filed.

There will be another meeting this morning at 8 o'clock at Antieth Baptist church. All women interested are invited to attend. Rev. A. Barber of Galveston is requested to furnish, through The Post, a list of the killed, living and dead of the colored people.

LEAVING THE ISLAND.

Two Big Trainloads of Galvestonians Arrived in Houston Yesterday.

NEARLY 2000 IN ALL SEEK REFUGE

From the Scene of the Fearful Disaster—They Were Welcomed by the Relief Committee.

Two big trainloads of Galvestonians reached Houston yesterday, one arriving about 3 p. m. and the other about 10 o'clock last night, nine coaches in each train loaded to the guards.

There was so much confusion at the depot incident to the departure of an earlier train carrying down a detachment of United States troops from San Antonio and the arrival of the trains from Galveston that the Cowboys Rangers were called out to preserve order.

On the outgoing train carrying the military crowds swarmed into the coaches, trying to get to Galveston, but for their trouble they were met with a military guard at Texas City, who, at the point of bayonets, intercepted their further progress and it was further stated that a similar cordon guarded the wharf front at Galveston to stop any who might attempt to land from boats other than those engaged in the Texas City service.

Yesterday morning at 11 o'clock crowds of people began to congregate at the International and Great Northern depot, anxious people, waiting for the arrival of the train, which was momentarily expected from Texas City, loaded with Galvestonians. An hour after hour rolled by the crowd increased until at last when the train arrived there were at least 500 people to welcome the refugees from the distressed city of Galveston. And real refugees some in the crowded coaches, were women and children by the scores, and many of them had in the world was what they had on their backs. There were nine coaches filled to their utmost capacity; every seat was crowded with women and children, and in the aisles men were standing.

So there must have been at least 1000 people on the train, many of whom had some relative or warm friend in Houston to welcome them to their homes.

The relief committee had provided for the accommodation of about 500 people, but it was soon seen that nearly every one on the train would be otherwise provided for. Only thirty-nine up to a late hour had been registered at any of the places which the committee had provided.

The following are at Bryan hall: R. S. TAYLOR, wife and two children. J. M. FLYNN'S son, 4 years old. C. HACKENDORF, wife and three children.

Mrs. C. E. MARFFE and two children. JOHN SWANSON and two children. Mrs. H. K. COSMER and two children. Miss CLARA ROBERTSON. ANDREW ROBERTSON. MARY ROBERTSON.
